5. Write a precis on the following passage, giving it a suitable title. [12+4]

When we survey our lives and efforts, we soon observe that almost the whole of our actions and desires are bound up with the existence of other human beings. We notice that whole nature resembles that of the social animals. We eat food that others have produced, wear clothes that others have made, live in houses that others have built. The greater part of our knowledge and beliefs has been passed on to us by other people through the medium of a language which others have created. Without language and mental capacities, we would have been poor indeed comparable to higher animals.

We have therefore to admit that we owe our principal knowledge over the least to the fact of living in human society. The individual if left alone from birth would remain primitive and beast like in his thoughts and feelings to a degree that we can hardly imagine. The individual is what he is and has the significance that he has not much in virtue of the individuality, but rather as a member of a great human community, which directs his material and spiritual existence from the cradle to the grave. (193 words)

5. Write a précis of the following passage and add a suitable title: [12+4]

Although epics have appeared all over the world in different periods of history, their narratives can often be remarkably similar. Normally an epic poem will involve a hero (usually male) who sets off on a journey, more often than not a physical journey like "The Odyssey" or "The Epic of Gilgamesh". Sometimes the journey can be more psychological, in 'The Iliad', the hero Achilles goes through an immense emotional journey.

Our heroes, across their journeys, will more than often find themselves coming across a variety of terrifying obstacles. Sometimes in the form of wild beasts and sometimes from the many gods and goddesses who tended to meddle in the lives of ancient heroes. These obstacles feature often in epic poems as a chance to show the audience how brave, strong or noble the poem's hero is. On rare occasions, an epic poem may use an obstacle to expose a flaw or weakness in the hero, this would normally occur towards the beginning of a poem, to show how the hero grows on their journey.

One motivating factor for these heroes is that of fame and glory, epic heroes wish to be remembered for eternity. As a result, they defy the gods and fight monsters, leaving home for lengthy periods hoping to return and be adored. The lives of these heroes are often short but their aim is to be remembered for their outstanding acts of bravery by later generations.

5. Write a precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title. [12+4]

The Indian Constitution adopts Universal adult franchise as a basis of election to the Lok Sabha and the state legislative assemblies. Every citizen who is not less than 18 years of age has a right to vote without any discrimination of caste, race, religion, sex, literacy, wealth and so on. The voting age was reduced to 18 years from 21 years in 1989 by the 61st Constitutional Amendment Act of 1988. The introduction of universal adult franchise by the constitution makers was a bold experiment and highly remarkable in view of the vast size of the country, its huge population, high poverty, social inequality and overwhelming illiteracy.

Universal adult franchise makes democracy broad based, enhances the self respect and prestige of the common people, upholds the principle of equality, enables minorities to protect their interests and opens up new hopes and vistas for weaker section.

5. Write a precis of the following passage and add a suitable title. [12+4]

In Literature, students read and respond to a variety of literary texts from the genres of prose, poetry and drama. The texts can range from classics such as Shakespeare, to modern works such as the Boy in Striped Pyjamas by John Boyne. The greatest value of Literature is that it promotes empathy as it develops in the child a greater understanding of the human condition. When students study Literature, they learn to appreciate words and their power. They travel to other realms and times through the texts they read. They understand about their own culture and others. They learn to empathise with characters, to feel their joys and pain.

Importantly, students of literature learn to consider multiple perspectives and understand the complexity of human nature. Take, for example, George Orwell's Animal farm. Do we feel Napoleon is fully responsible for the miserable lives the animals lead? Aren't the other animals responsible for their own plight too, having allowed Napoleon to tyrannise them? In Literature, as in life, things aren't always so clear cut, in black and white. And therein lies the value of the subject - it prepares one for the ambiguities of life, to take uncertainties in one's stride. Moreover, in Literature, students develop a sense of individuality and creativity, as they develop their own options about issues. They also learn skills of persuasion - they need to convince others of their interpretations, and this builds their confidence.

5. Write precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title: [12+4]

We live in an age of great hurry and great speed. Man have lost their inward resources. They merely reflect. Like a set of mirrors, opinions which they get a little leisure, they turn to material diversions from outside rather than to inward resources. This internal vacuum is responsible for mental and nervous troubles. The cure for this is not so much treatment by medicine and surgery but a recovery of faith in the ultimate goodness, truth and decency of things. If we are able to recover that faith, if we are able, to live in this world with our consciousness centered in the intimacy of the spirit, many of the problems to which we are subject today may be overcome. Our people were regarded as aspiring after metaphysical insight, but we seen to forget that it never occurred to them to equate eternal life with either the surrender of the mind or the sacrifice of the body. When an Unpunished writer was asked to define what is meant by spiritual life, he gave the answer that it consists of the satisfaction of the mind, abundance of tranquillity of the spirit. Body, mind and spirit must be integrated and they must lead to the harmonious developed life. If we get that, we have life eternal.

It the objective of our education is total development, art training should have the same status and importance as reading and writing. Education in arts heightens man's knowledge and aesthetic experience and trains him in various modes of education. The roots of art education lie in the observation of nature and good works of art with dedicated attention, living in close contact with them and understanding them with the help of men with develop aesthetic sensibilities. Each school and university should provide a place for art studies with other studies, making compulsory. It should provide the children and students with time and the environment to get acquainted with Nature. Training in drawing will develop their powers of observation and this in turn will give them better insight into literature, philosophy and science. However we should not expect students to become great artists or simply artists because a person cannot become a poet just by passing a course of poetry at any institution of repute. (165 words)

5. Write a precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title: [12+4]

It is the height of selfishness for men, who fully appreciate in their own case the great advantage of a good education, to deny these advantages to women. There is no valid argument by which de-exclusion of the female sex from the privilege of education can be defended. It is argued that women have their domestic duties to perform, and that, if they were educated, they would bury themselves in their books and have little time for attending to the management of their households. Of course it is possible for women, as it is for men, to neglect necessary work in order to spare more time for reading sensational novels. But women are no more liable to this temptation than men, and most women would be able to do their household work all the better for being able to refresh their minds in the intervals of leisure with a little reading. Nay, education would even help them in the performance of the narrowest sphere of the womanly duty. For education involves knowledge of the means by which health may be preserved and improved, and enables a mother to consult such modern books as will tell her how to rear up her children into healthy men and women and skilfully nurse them and her husband when disease attacks her household. Without education she will be not unlikely to listen with fatal results to the advice of superstitious quacks.

5. Write a precis on the following passage. Giving it a suitable title (justification of title not required): [12+4]

If trade union movement in any country has to be made an effective instrument in the promotion of workers' interest, it needs some radical structural changes. It may be difficult to amalgamate different warring factions into a coherent and purposeful organisation, but unless it is achieved, the trade unions cannot serve any useful purpose. It is high time the trade unions realised that they owed their basic duty to the workers and not to the political parties to which they are invariably affiliated. The concept of 'one industry, one union' could be beneficial to the movement. It will eliminate inter union rivalries and increase the bargaining power of the workers. The trade union leaders must possess two basic qualities : they should be people of integrity and understanding and they should be fully enlightened about the legal and constitutional rights available to the unions so that they can lead a fair and powerful struggle.
